PLOS BIOLOGY Phylogenomics Reveals Three Sources of Adaptive Genetic Variation in Wild Tomato

Abstract

Speciation events often occur in rapid bursts of diversification, but the ecological and genetic factors that promote these radiations are still much debated. Using whole transcriptomes from all 13 species in the ecologically and reproductively diverse wild tomato clade (Solanum sect. Lycopersicon), we infer the species phylogeny and patterns of genetic diversity in this group. Despite widespread phylogenetic discordance due to the sorting of ancestral variation, we date the origin of this radiation to approximately 2.5 million years ago and find evidence for at least three sources of adaptive genetic variation that fuel diversification. First, we detect introgression both historically between early-branching lineages and recently between individual populations, at specific loci whose functions indicate likely adaptive benefits. Second, we find evidence of lineage-specific de novo evolution for many genes, including loci involved in the production of red fruit color. Finally, using a "PhyloGWAS" approach, we detect environment-specific sorting of ancestral variation among populations that come from different species but share common environmental conditions.

Introduction

Speciation—the origin of new species—occurs when diverging lineages accumulate ecological, functional, and/or reproductive differences that result

De Río a París. Desarrollos de las Relaciones Internacionales en torno al medioambiente II

Febrero de 2017 / Coordinadores: Jorge Estévez, Lucrécia Rubio Grundel y Mica Ruz Campillo / Descargar nº 34 completo

PRESENTACIÓN EDITORIAL ARTÍCULOS FRAGMENTOS VENTANA SOCIAL REVIEW-ESSAYS RESEÑAS

En este número, seguimos reflexionando en torno al medioambiente y la ecología desde la perspectiva de las Relaciones Internacionales como hicimos en el número anterior, atendiendo a los múltiples ejes que estructuran dicha relación. Este número cuenta con una especificidad, sin embargo, el centrarse en un eje particular tanto en el Fragmento como en la Ventana Social: la agenda ecofeminista. Aunque la multiplicidad y complejidad de las posturas ecofeministas nos impiden hacer un análisis en profundidad de la evolución y la riqueza actual de dicha agenda, no podíamos dejar pasar la oportunidad de ofrecer al menos unas pinceladas de las voces ecofeministas occidentales, de entonces y de ahora, voces académicas y activistas a menudo ignoradas y silenciadas, que encuentran aquí un pequeño, aunque importante, espacio de vindicación. Con estos dos números hemos tratado de suplir la falta de atención que durante años se le ha dado a las cuestiones medioambientales dentro de las Relaciones Internacionales y culminamos así un número doble que ha contado con autores europeos y latinoamericanos que han enriquecido la revista con sus respectivas visiones sobre el papel del medioambiente y los actores internacionales en un área que sin duda seguirá desarrollándose dentro de nuestra disciplina.

Where to apply the display guidelines

Crossref DOIs should be displayed in the full URL wherever the bibliographic information about the content is displayed.

An obligation of membership is that Crossref DOIs must be displayed on members' response pages (also called landing pages). We recommend that Crossref DOIs also be displayed or distributed in the following contexts:

- Tables of contents
- Abstracts
- Full text HTML and PDF articles, and other scholarly documents
- Citation downloads to reference management systems
- Metadata feeds to third parties
- "How to Cite This" instructions on content pages
- Social network links
- Anywhere users are directed to a permanent, stable, or persistent link to the content

Crossref members should not use proprietary, internal or other non-DOI URLs in citation downloads, metadata feeds to third parties, nor in instructions to researchers on how to cite a document.

Crossref DOIs in reference lists and bibliographies

Linking references in journal articles using Crossref DOIs is a condition of membership. We strongly encourage members to link references in other content types too. Because there are space constraints even in online references lists, Crossref DOIs can be displayed in several ways, depending on the publisher's preference and publication style. Crossref recommends the following options:

Reflection of Bratislava Retail Network in Selected Aspects of Consumer BehaviourPavol Kita (University of Economics in Bratislava, Slovakia)
Marta Groszmannová (University of Economics in Bratislava, Slovakia)Abstract

The paper analyses the evolution of the retail network of the capital city of Slovakia Bratislava affecting buying behavior and lifestyle of its consumers. From the marketing point of view, it characterizes the current retail network in Bratislava and presents the main trends in the development of retail stores in Bratislava. It shows, on the one hand, how the importance of consumer behaviour rise in the decline economic prosperity during last years, while on the other hand, how the concentration in retail declines the chances for success of small independent food retail stores during last recent years. The authors used methodologies, e.g. multidimensional scaling, GIS, for testing, assesses the significance of these changes on the sample involving 11 389 respondents interviewed. The paper presents the results of research project VEGA No. 1/0038/11 Geographical Information System as a Source of Strategic Innovation of Enterprise from the Point of View of Strengthening its Competitiveness.

Simple joint inversion localized formulae for relaxation spectrum recovery

Rafael José Andrés-Lacort, Javier Escobar-Castro, Faustino Esteban de Almagro, Roberto López

Abstract

In oscillatory stress experiments, the values of the storage and loss moduli, $G'(\omega)$ and $G''(\omega)$, respectively, are only measured and recorded for a number of values of the frequency ω in some well-defined strain range. However, in dynamic mechanical analysis, when the input data are noisy, an efficient single minimization about the assumed physical structure can be employed to roughly compute the corresponding formulae that depend on $G'(\omega)$ and $G''(\omega)$. For other situations, the required analytical insight can only be obtained once explicit knowledge about the structure of the relaxation time spectrum $H(\tau)$ has been obtained through the analysis of the measured storage and loss moduli $G'(\omega)$ and $G''(\omega)$. For the recovery of an approximation to $H(\tau)$, it is able to cope with the limited range $\omega_{min} < \omega < \omega_{max}$ of the experimental data from a relatively algorithm as required. A possible strategy for solving this is to consider that $H(\tau)$ has a separated discrete part (a sum of Dirac delta functions) structure. However, this required involves the provided information contained in the structure of a possibly continuous $H(\tau)$. In this paper, simple localization algorithms and, in particular, a joint inversion least squares procedure, are proposed for the rapid recovery of accurate approximations to continuous $H(\tau)$ from limited measurements of $G'(\omega)$ and $G''(\omega)$.
